Every summer XLAB organizes two International Science Camps. They attract interested high school students, undergraduate college and university students, aged about 17 to 20 years. Courses are offered in biology, chemistry, physics and computer science and supervised by scientists of the University of Göttingen and affiliated research organizations.

The students work in small groups of two or three. All experiments are hands-on experiments. Demonstrations are rarely used and limited only to highly sophisticated experiments, to the use of NMR, X-Ray or other large research instruments.

During the XLAB International Science Camps English is the language used among students, teachers and scientists.

At the weekends and in the evenings a cultural and social program is arranged. Social contacts among students of different cultural background are as important as experimental work and scientific learning.

The science camp last for 3 ½ weeks, including an excursion during the last days.

The costs for the camp 2008 are 1.750 € which is all-inclusive except for the travel expenses to Göttingen and to get home. Financial support is possible. Application for a scholarship should be submitted before March 15th.

1 st week	2 nd week	3 rd week
Anatomy	Organic Chemistry	Biochemistry
Molecular Biology	Evolution in a Testtube	Ecology
Physics of Flying	Neurophysiology	Radiation Physics

example for a typical ISC schedule

During the science camp each participant will attend three different weekly courses. Students select courses of their interest and indicate their first and second choices. The final schedule will be set according to the interest of the applicants.
